Dr. Ann Rhoten graduated in 1985 from University of Kentucky with a Bachelor of Science in Speech and Communication Disorders, from University of Louisville in 1986 with a Master of Science in Audiology and from Arizona School of Health Sciences in 2006 with a doctorate in Audiology. She is certified in the treatment and management of tinnitus and sound sensitivity disorders by the Tinnitus Practitioners Association and the Tinnitus Retraining Therapy Association. She has worked in several different settings over the last 28 years. Currently she owns and operates a private practice specializing in the treatment and management of tinnitus and sound sensitivity disorders."

Tinnitus commonly known as ringing in the ear affects roughly 17% of the U.S. population. Many medical professionals continue to tell people there is nothing they can do. Although there is no cure for tinnitus, there are many management strategies that allow the tinnitus sufferer to successfully deal with the issues associated with significant tinnitus. The presentation will discuss common causes of tinnitus, the distinction between someone with tinnitus and someone who suffers from it and management strategies.
